along with troubled artists to paint murals on a few buildings around the city. From this small project, something magiccal happened. The young people involved helped to create magnificient pieces of art, but there were other, perhaps more important benefits. The young people learnt to colaborate and get along with many different kinds of people during the various steps required to paint and design a mural. They learnt to be responsible; because they needed to follow a shedule to make sure the murals were completted. They also learnt to take pride in their community. Or

Read the given passage and answer the questions following it :

The defects of the ordinary system of mass education are many and they may be briefly summarized as follows. First, the system of teaching in large classes is rigid. No allowance is made for the peculiar mental constitution of the individual child, who is sacrificed to the average of the classes. The class and the fixed curriculum are like the bed of Procrustes in the story; those who are too long for the bed are cut down until they fit; and those who are too short are stretched.

The child, who is quick and talented in one subject but not in others is compelled under the current system of mass education to sacrifice his talents to his deficiencies. Thus, a child may have a great talent for English and none for arithmetic. They may have a real feeling for literature, a gift for composition; but when you ask them what percentage of a floor 18.7 feet long by 53/16 meters wide remains uncovered when you have spent three pounds even shillings and seven pence on linoleum costing $179.06 per acre, they find it difficult or impossible to reply they must, therefore, remain in a low class, where they read nothing but baby books and concentrate on spelling and grammar until such times as they can solve this interesting and instructive problems.

Second, under the present system of mass education by classes, too much stress is laid on teaching and too little on active learning. The children are not encouraged to discover things on their own account. They learn to rely on outside help, not on their own powers, thus losing intellectual independence and all capacity to judge for themselves. Moreover, lessons in class leave them mainly unoccupied, and there bored. They have to be forced into learning what does not interest them and the information acquired mechanically and reluctantly, by dint of brute repetition forgotten.

Third, the children, being bored and unoccupied, also become mischievous. A strict external discipline becomes necessary, unless there is to be confusion. The children learn to obey, not to control themselves. They lose moral as well as intellectual independence.

Questions :

(i) Give the passage a suitable title.

(ii) Why does the author think that the ordinary system of mass education is rigid?

(iii) What reason does the author give for a child not developing intellectual independence?

(iv) Find words from the passage which have similar meaning to the following :

Educative

Shortcomings

Unwillingly

Naughty
