Printed Pages – 8

576333 (76)
676533 (76)

MBA (3rd Semester)

Examination, Nov.-Dec., 2014

Branch : Management

ADVERTISING AND SALES PROMOTION (NEW)

Time Allowed : Three Hours

Maximum Marks : 80

Minimum Pass Marks : 32

Note : (i) Select any four questions from section "A".

(ii) Section "B" is compulsory.

Section "A"

Q. 1. (a) What is the relationship between advertising and the over all IMC process ? 6

(b) Define clutter. Name some of the forms of clutter in marketing communications. 10

Or

(c) What are the steps of an advertising campaign management process ? What other process is similar in nature.

Q. 2. (a) What are main components of advertising. 6

(b) What are the advantages and disadvantages of rational appeals ? Which media do they best match ? 10

Or

(c) How are slice of life and dramatization executional frameworks similar ? How are they different.

Q. 3. (a) What types of testimonials can advertisers use ? Give examples of each. 6

(b) Discuss the role of direct marketing as an IMC tools, giving attention to the various forms of direct marketing. 10

Or

(c) In a means or end chain, what are the means ? the ends ? How do they effect advertising design ?

Q. 4. (a) Discuss the role of IMC in marketing process. 6

(b) What is a product & brand manager ? Discuss how a brand manager would be involved with the integrated marketing communication program. 10

Or

(c) Describe how cultural differences might impact viewers perceptions of advertisements provide examples.

Q. 5. (a) Discuss the role of creativity in advertising. 6

(b) Short notes (any two) : 10

(i) AIDA Model

(ii) Various international environmental factors influencing advertising & promotion decision.

(iii) Publicity & corporate advertising in the promotional mix.

Or

(c) What is reach ? Give examples of reach in various advertising media.

Q. 6. (a) Define sales promotion. What are the two main categories of sales promotion ? 6

(b) Short notes (any two) : 10

(i) Hierarchy of effect model

(ii) Regulation of advertising, sales promotion & ethics.

(iii) Methods of measuring promotional program effectiveness.

Or

(c) Discuss some of the reasons managers continue to set budget using top down budgeting methods.

Section "B"

Case Study

16

Hank Freeman was excited. His new store, Hank's Furniture Mart, was about to open. Hank had been in the furniture business for more than 10 years, first as a delivery and setup man and then as an in-store salesperson. This was his big chance to launch out on his own. Using some money that he inherited, various loans, and the investment of a silent partner, the mid-price-range retail furniture store was ready for business.

Hank's Furniture Mart was located outside the city limits of a large metropolitan area. Being outside the city limits meant customers would not have to pay city sales tax. The store was part of a large corner cluster. Hank's agreement with the other tenants was to stay out of the mattress and bedding business, because another retailer sold those items exclusively. For the same reason, he also agreed that he would not sell television sets or stereos. A "country-kitchen" chain restaurant was located across the parking lot from the retail stores. The entire shopping complex could be reached easily, because of its convenient location next to the interstate.

Hank knew any furniture store faced a variety of competitors. On the high end, stores such Ethan Allen attracted the affluent customers. On the lower end were large warehouse-style operations offering low prices and prompt delivery of lower-quality pieces. In the middle, several retail chains sold various furnishings. Specialty stores that focused solely on recliners were also close by.

Two advantages gave Hank hope that his store would be a grand success. The first was his extensive knowledge of the retail furniture business. He knew how various stores competed, whether through price, quality, "deals," or any other tactic. His knowledge extended to the various manufactures. Hank knew which ones gave the best deals, which ones delivered merchandise on time (or late), and the quality levels of the pieces each sold.

The second advantage was Hank's extensive potential customer base. Hank had been working in the retail furniture marketplace for more than a decade. He believed he had a series of loyal buyers and that word-of-mouth would be a big help.

At the same time, Hank knew he would have to advertise. He had set aside enough money to fund television spots and radio, newspaper, Internet, and specialty ads, including direct mail. Hank had chosen a local agency to develop a consistent theme across all the store's ads. He suggested the tagline "Hank's Furniture Mart : Our prices are right and our deals are real."

1. What type of message strategy should Hank's Furniture Mart feature ?
2. What type of executional framework should Hank's ads utilize ? Which type of appeal will the framework feature ?
3. Who should be spokesperson for the store, Hank or a paid professional actor ?
4. Design a print ad for Hank's Furniture Mart.